PROFESSIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

OPEN TO ALL HBCU STUDENTS, ALUMNI, FACULTY AND STAFF, HISTORICALLY UNDERREPRESENTED ENTREPRENEURS, MINORITY BUSINESS OWNERS, COMMUNITY LEADERS, AND GOVERNMENT REPRESENTATIVES

HBCU Entrepreneur's Week is a biannual immersive event experience designed with and for historically underrepresented entrepreneurs, businesses, and communities. Each HBCU Entrepreneur's Week is hosted at one of the 101 Historically Black Colleges and Universities located across 19 States, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands. These events are designed to stimulate entrepreneur development, and to assist with mapping, building, connecting, and growing inclusive sustainable ecosystems.

The mission of HBCU Entrepreneur's Week is to make interdisciplinary entrepreneurship experiences, opportunities, resources, and support accessible to all HBCU students, alumni, faculty, and staff, and to strengthen local community relations at each host HBCU destination.

To ensure optimal access and reach, all onsite presentations are LIVE streamed and recorded and made available via this hybrid event platform.

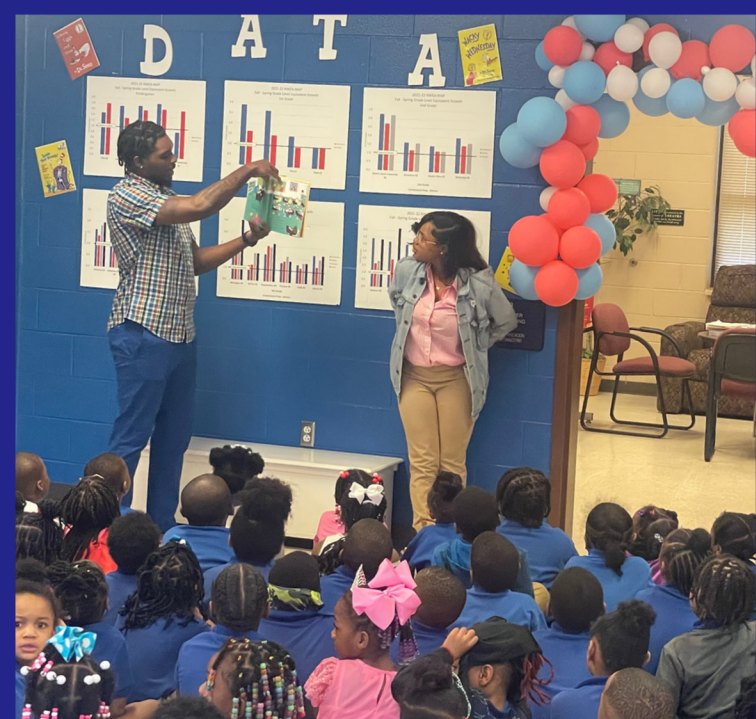

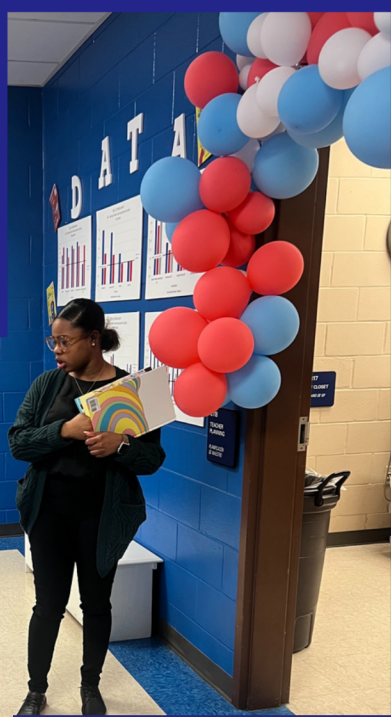

Each day at Jackson State University includes presentations by subject matter experts, onsite and virtual exhibits, and opportunities to meet 1-1 during pre-scheduled "business speed dating" appointments.

WHERE MATH & SCIENCE MEET

Currently, research is being done within the intersection of mathematical modeling and health science education at Rust College. Dr. Cadavious Jones, Dean of the Division of Science and Mathematics at Rust College and a team of researchers working globally, recently published the article modeling the impact of public health education on tungiasis dynamics with saturated treatment: Insight through the Caputo fractional derivative. This work appears in the latest edition of the AIMS journal Mathematical Biosciences and Engineering, 2023, Volume 20, Issue 5.

Tungiasis is an infection caused by the female sand flea and is found in tropical and subtropical regions of the world. It has spread to almost all countries in sub-Saharan Africa. Over 20 million individuals (about the population of New York) are estimated at risk in the WHO Region of the Americas alone, and the poorest carry the highest burden of the disease. In endemic areas, standard treatment is surgical extraction of the sand fleas that can cause inflammation and ulcers that can become severe, and multiple lesions in the feet can lead to difficulty in walking. Secondary bacterial infections, including tetanus and gangrene, are common. Thus, providing awareness in affected areas and understanding the effectiveness of related strategies is key.

Rust College understands the importance of such research and continues to engage the world in meaningful STEM research and STEM education.
